

Penrith Valley

The eastern escarpment of the Blue Mountains begins at the western boundary of Penrith Valley and extends over more than 247,000 hectares of native bushland. From "The Rock" Lookout, the Blue Mountains National Park spreads westward from the gorge to a hazy horizon. The call of the bellbirds is all that breaks the silence.

Ten minutes west of Penrith is the Glenbrook entrance to the Blue Mountains National Park. This area offers easily accessible swimming holes, lookouts over the Nepean River and scenic picnic and camping spots, including the enchanting Euroka Clearing where it is easy to find kangaroos and wallabies grazing. Many of the walking tracks feature highlights for those with an interest in geology, plant and bird life and Aboriginal history.

A short trip from Penrith Valley will take you to popular and famous attractions in the Blue Mountains such as The Three Sisters at Katoomba and on to Jenolan Caves, dated at 340 million years old, making them the oldest known open caves in the world..
